

6 Mistakes That Sabotage Great Communication

Saying something once is not enough, no matter how rousing or inspiring the message might be.

Just because you're communicating, it doesn't mean you're doing it well.

At the core of every great relationship is great communication. The same is true of great teams. Effective communication is necessary for any leadership team to work together cohesively, engage employees, and create loyal customers.

Some of the symptoms of poor communication include disconnection, gossiping, and inefficiency.

The Society for Human Resource Management surveyed 400 companies with 100,000 employees each and found that companies lost an average of $62.4 million per year because of inadequate communication with and among employees.

In my work as an executive coach, I have noticed that there are six mistakes that crop up consistently that sabotage great communication.

Read more

Sponsorship Message: This eDirect Mail Campaign is sponsored by InfoCheck Solutions.

Disclaimer Statement: All information presented is for information purposes only and is not intended to provide professional or legal advice regarding actions to take in any situation. Advertisements are presented for information and marketing purposes only. The views expressed by advertisers are exclusively their own and should not be construed to represent the views of The National Institute for Prevention of Workplace Violence, Inc. in any way. Also The National Institute for Prevention of Workplace Violence, Inc. makes no representations for any products or services that are promoted and accepts no responsibility for any actions or consequences that occur as a result of any purchases from advertisers.